

ABSTRACT

A method and system for analyzing a color rendering capability of at least one color imaging device with multiple color channels obtaining includes obtaining spectral sensitivity curves for two or more of the multiple color channels in the color imaging device and determining an image quality value for the color imaging device from the spectral sensitivity curves for the two or more of the multiple color channels in the color imaging device.